Definition of social work

The social work profession promotes social change, problem solving in human relationships and the empowerment and liberation of people to enhance well-being. Utilizing theories of human behavior and social systems, social work intervenes at the points where people interact with their environments. Principles of human rights and social justice are fundamental to social work.²

International definition of social work

The social work profession promotes social change, problem solving in human relationships and the empowerment and liberation of people to enhance well-being. Utilising theories of human behaviour and social systems, social work intervenes at the points where people interact with their environments. Principles of human rights and social justice are fundamental to social work.

Towards Global standards

Standards regarding

- the school's core purpose or mission statement
- programme objectives and outcomes

Standards with regard

- to programme curricula including field education
- to core curricula (Training/Practice)
- to social work students
- to structure, administration, governance and resources
- to cultural and ethnic diversity and gender inclusiveness
- to values and ethical codes of conduct of the social work profession

Specificity for the social work sector

- School of Social Work train social workers on vocational level and higher education.
- Schools of Social Work (SSW) are involved in different types of training: vocational training, continuing vocational training and higher education. They are assimilated to university and are considered as private centres with public missions (cultural animation, professional formation, research, vocational training).
- The main challenge for the social work sector is to articulate the national diploma with the Bologna process and to implement now the three cycles (bachelor, master, doctorate) in the qualification of the professionals.

Who is a social worker in France?

In France, Schools of Social Work train social workers on vocational level and higher education.

They can offer until 15 different diplomas or qualifications in Social Work. Social work training leads to professional certificate (ex. apprenticeship or certificate of vocational skills) or higher diploma.

It concerns specific level of qualification (care giver, care assistant, social worker, team manager, director) and includes various social fields (handicap, prevention, youth, elderly, etc).

The main challenges

- to organize better and create links between universities and high schools and develop the doctoral studies in the European context
- to strengthen the international dimension of the higher education (Cross-border work in social work, training and job mobility)
- to integrate at management level the international standards of quality
